SPECIAL EDITION.

At eight o'clock to-morrow (Friday) morning, a special revolution edition of the DAILY BULLETIN will be issued for the S. S. Australia's foreign mail closing at eleven o'clock. This edition will contain all the matter referring to the insurrection appearing in this paper from the first, with some additional matter to be put in type this evening. Copies will be procurable from the office and the bookstores.

THE INSURRECTION.

The proceedings of Tuesday, July 30th, make a fantastic illustration on the pages of what has been eventful Hawaiian history. There have been several turbulent incidents within living memory, the riots at the present King's accession, the Moreno episode, the revolution for constitutional government in 1887, and, now, the Wilcox fiasco that has brought its authors to grief and caused the sacrifice of several lives among the misguided band. We are not going to intrude counsel upon the authorities as to what shall be done with the rebels. The Exe- have been an uncommon triumph of cutive and the Judiciary are competent to deal with them. There are some considerations, however, appropriate to the event which are matter of public discussion. What Mr. Gribble so ably sets forth regarding precautions for the future need not here be emphasized at pre-

A great folly of the past is illustrated in bold relief by this squelched uprising. Although, as has often been well said, Hawaii's weakness is her strength, a crazy military ambition once, like an evil spirit, possessed the government. Under this influence the policy of having Hawaiian youth of promise educated in specific lines at great centers of civilization was employed to give Robert W. Wilcox and Robert Boyd a military and a naval training, respectively, in Italian schools. Such skill as was necessary to be acquired in those branches of course comprised a degree of knowledge of much utility in the arts of peace, out this object could have been amply and better reached without going so far from home, while the warlike attainments of our heroes seem not to have included the commonsense required to make great erment. commanders had the country been in distress for such at this juncture. It may be depended upon that Henry Grube Marchant, now learning the art of engraving in Boston at Government expense, will not further cost the country blood and bills of repairs when returned home, but will prove a needed and valuable acquisition to the arts of peace. This is the only kind of education that Hawaiian youth should be sent from home to obtain.

A great mistake is made by some people when they look upon Wilcox's attempted coup d'etat as a similar movement to the Reform revolution and justifiable by that event. We admit that it is an open question whether the scheme of the Reform League was absolutely Recessary and wise-that is, whether the positive necessity of securing constitutional government might not have been obtained within a reasonable the Palace bungalow by a rabble so period by peaceful agitation. Apart irresolute that they could not ob-from that question, however, there tain possession of the palace, although only held by a handful of native soldiers, is a melancholy fact, and the people will want to know whether it is necessary to have such things happening occasionally to the great detriment of the public credit, or whether it is possible to prevent are many points of difference between the two attempts-the successful and the unsuccessful-at overthrowing the Government of the day. In 1887 the people were replied to in their constitutional agitation, by threats of expulsion or murder of foreigners, by active warlike preparations as if for the carrying out of such threats, and by constantly aggravating wrongs of administration. When the League was ready for action, after an independent press had long given warning that serious measures would be taken if reform was not granted without, peaceful counsels still prevailed with the agitators. They chose to voice popular grievances in a mass meeting, the show of force to protect which was even called forth by the Cabinet (admitting that it was coming out anyway). The King ostensibly met the League halfway by a message of concessions presented at that meeting, and His Majesty was only further confronted with forcible measures when he showed a disposition to avoid his own promises to the people but a Cabinet that has passed the approvreassuring nature, to be felt in rela-enormously criminal.

The thing was not sprung as a mine upon the city by clever unknown conspirators. It had been town gossip for weeks, and the clumsy boys who got it up, had, native-like, given half their scheme away from the outset. When the thing was done the riflemen set to work to quell the disturbance in good and manful earnest, proving that there is sufficient material in the city to preserve order as much as to restore it, but whilst according the due meed of praise to the gallant colonel, officers and men, it is to be hoped that everything will be done to prevent the riot being magnified. It is certain that attempts will be made elsewhere so to color up the whole affair in the interests of journalism that Hawaii will be believed to be in a seriously disaffected state, the Government unstable, Honolulu an unsafe place to visit, and Hawaiian investments things to be severely let alone. How untrue such reports would be only the people here would know; they have been believed before in fereign parts, and they will be believed again.

Is it too much to ask, that some investigation be set on foot into the present system for preserving peace and order in the kingdom with a view to reassuring friends both at sively matters of detail. Its general home and abroad?

Everyone will congratulate the defenders of the city on any rewards which the people may award them for their services; though possibly they do not seek other reward than the nation's gratitude; but if the authorities can organise a system of such efficiency that without the need of martial law and any other weapon than the policeman's truncheon, riots can be kept from ever coming to a head, they will deserve still greater tribute from the London was electrified a few years ago by the possibility of a riot such as that now famous as the Trafalgar Square riot, whena mob armed with sticks and stones took temporary possession of the streets, and the aid of the military was needed. The lesson learned was not to alter the form of municipal government by giving it more of a military character, but consisted in the complete overhaul of the police system, specially that of the Intelligence Department and the arrangements for rapid concentration of the reserve police forces at any intended point.

The Frenchman said of the English that the weak point about them was that they were all "too jolly comfortable," and perhaps Honopart of the Opposition, it would Julu has found that out too and will emerge from this gruesome business multiform characters which make up Therefore, the attempt of Wilcox her population. ### A SUGGESTION.

EDITOR BULLETIN:-It has been said, that the worst use that can be made of a man is to Lang him; and upon this principle, some of the governors of the States of the United States pardon criminals under sentence of death, upon condition that they shall immediately thereafter leave the State and never return, without permission of the governor of the State, and when such pardon is duly accepted by the culprit, it is held to be binding, and if he is afterward found in the State, or leaves the State, and afterward returns without permission, he may be arrested and hung.

VERBUM SAT.

TAKE THAT WALL DOWN.

EDITOR BULLETIN: - There are nany things that Honolulu needs to have done, some of which can wait until a more convenient season, some need to be done at once. The immediate demolition of the wail around the Palace grounds is one of these. It should come down at once, and be used for road material. It should come down now, Because every one sees distinctly that it is a menace to the peace of the community. Any hair-brained enthusiast with a rabble at his heels can muster behind that relie of the middle ages, and put the community to serious inconvenience, if not loss of life before being dislodged.

Because it is an unsightly barrier altogether out of keeping with the building it surrounds. The Palace is not a prison, and the King need fear no enemy from outside so long as there is decency and good order and regard for civil government in-

Because the public have an inherent right to all the comfort and enjoyment that would come from making those grounds beautiful, and accessible from every direction. Emma Square is diminutive and Thomas Square is too remote. Let us have a Palace Square with a neat curb about it, and walls and founpains, and landscape gardening that shall be in keeping with the Palace, and forever be a convenient, comfortable resting place for the people.

The present is a very suggestive time to de a little iconoclastic work with this vestige of medievalism. "Take that wall down!" W. B. O.
